

You are requested to confirm receipt of this information so 1st CHOICE may be of help to you. This document in no way obligates you at any time to continue to receive assistance from 1st CHOICE Advisory. The referral services provided to you are at no cost to you, the consumer.

About 1st CHOICE Advisory Services, Inc.

1ST CHOICE [which will be referred to also as “the agency”] was established in 1993 as a senior housing & care referral service. The agency's primary function is to identify and make senior housing and care information and resources available to consumers. The agency gathers pertinent information about the older adult through its intake process which helps to identify needs, interests and preferences of the older adult. Based on this input, the agency then provides housing and care options likely to be of interest to the older adult(s) and/or responsible party.

The agency collects information about senior housing and care providers. The primary benefit of accessing the assistance of the agency is to yield a more focused search during the selection process. To help the client avoid the need to research options and make dozens or even hundreds of phone calls to providers, the agency gives the client a targeted list of providers offering services the agency believes to be in alignment with those being sought.

1ST CHOICE does not require or request the client to sign waivers of potential liability for losses of personal property or injury, or to sign waivers of any rights of the client established in state or federal law. It is, however, critical to note that the agency, through its processes and through this disclosure, have made a concerted effort to ensure the client is aware that the agency and its employees in no way make guarantees of services extended by providers.

The client is in charge of the selection process

Employees of the agency do not select a specific provider on behalf of the client. The client must make the selection of the provider of his or her own accord. Likewise, the client must negotiate applicable deposit, move-in and monthly rent and care fees directly with the provider. The agency makes options known to the client, but does not make the ultimate decision selecting any one particular option. If a client is seeking the recommendation to a specific housing or care provider, it is suggested that the client contract separately with a paid professional such as a guardianship agency, trust department or private case/care manager which may hold the legal capacity to fulfill such a responsibility.

All individuals living in senior living care communities or who are receiving care in their own home are considered to be at high risk for infection, virus, and disease. As many contagions cannot be accurately diagnosed in their early stages, neither senior living care providers nor 1st CHOICE staff can guarantee against contracting an infection, virus or disease. Even in cases where a provider indicates their current or past experience with these types of health matters, we remind all older adults and their families that it is not at all feasible for providers to accurately and categorically state the actual existence or non-existence of infection, virus or disease within their current resident population. Furthermore, regardless of what a provider may state as being their intention regarding controls, it is outside the realm of possibility to project the possibility of a current or future existence of infection, virus or disease.

1st CHOICE and its staff are held harmless from any injury or harm the spread of infection, virus or disease may cause.

Infection, virus and disease can cause severe health problems and are known causes of possible death.

Client's ongoing communication with the provider

Within the scope of senior housing and care referral services, 1ST CHOICE does not serve as arbitrator or communicator between client and provider. During both the search process and after move-in, 1ST CHOICE does not have the responsibility of ensuring communication or agreement between the client and provider.

Medical professional's approval may be required prior to admission

State law may require the older adult's physician become involved in defining medication management and the appropriate level of care prior to admission to a senior care community, or before arranging for in-home care services. Additionally, a professional nursing assessment and the completion of a care plan may be required (depending upon the laws for the state in which the senior living community or home is located). The agency does not offer medical advice. 1ST CHOICE Advisory is a non-medical information service. At no point is 1ST CHOICE staff able to ensure services or quality of services provided by a Provider. 1ST CHOICE staff are not trained in the numerous city, state, federal and fire safety laws that regulate senior housing and care providers. 1ST CHOICE staff has no exact knowledge of what services a care a provider may or may not offer as the management/owners of the senior living facility are the only individuals who can communicate or provide such information. Because the services providers offer are based on the current staffing levels as well as current resident needs, the admission and retention criteria of residents evolves and changes. The client and senior housing provider are fully responsible for reciprocal communications about admission and continued stay in a senior housing or care community

The quality and competency of the care and services provided within a community or home are the jurisdiction and purview of the applicable state licensing agency. Vigilant and on-going involvement of the family and/or a responsible party is strongly recommended in support of any vulnerable and/or older adult. With changes in ownership, management and staffing as well as changes in residents, an older adult needs the continued support and advocacy of a legally-responsible party.

The service is provided free-of-charge

So that referral services provided by the agency may be extended free-of-charge to its clients, the agency signs contracts with providers. The agency receives a referral fee (a calculation is based typically on a percentage of the fees paid by the older adult from the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th months of residency/services) from the provider selected by the client. The agency maintains a policy of charging the provider only when the provider is receiving direct compensation for housing and/or care from private funds or from long-term care insurance-based funds. The Agency accepts no fees from the provider if any part of the monthly cost of housing is paid to the Provider by Medicaid/COPES or Medicare. In instances where a resident passes away or moves out prior to the completion of contract with 1ST CHOICE, a prorated fee is charged to the provider.

The agency endeavors to contract with all providers in the same manner so that options are presented in a way which best serves the client. The agency makes the details of specific payments from the provider to the agency accessible to the client upon written request. (See the end of this document for the various ways you can contact the 1ST CHOICE main office.) The agency prides itself in its practice of full disclosure.

The agency provides information regarding provider options and is compensated by the provider (a client relationship to 1ST CHOICE), yet the consumer (older adult or their responsible party) is also considered by the agency as a client. The Client at no time pays any fee to the agency for referral support.

The Agency charges no fee to the client or older adult for referral services

1ST CHOICE prohibits any employee of the agency to assess any fees to the client or older adult for referral services. To ensure that the agency is compensated for our efforts, clients are asked to allow the agency to make initial introductions to all providers. Clients are particularly cautioned from entering their name and contact information in senior housing and care web sites. Most of these web sites are national companies who seek to sell your name to many senior living providers. All family members should be informed that help has been sought from 1ST CHOICE so that your name and contact information are appropriately protected from businesses who distribute such information randomly throughout the community.

If you own a long-term care insurance policy

1ST CHOICE and its representatives do not hold licensing or training to interpret long-term care insurance contracts. We do, however, offer a complimentary service of reading long-term care policies to give the client insight as to the types of providers that may or may not be approved by the insurance company and to help the client better understand how the language appearing in the policy may or may not relate to the actual industry of senior housing and care being offered at this time. 1ST CHOICE and its representatives cannot be held responsible for any loss, harm or injury which may occur as a result of information (or lack of information) given to the client about the long-term care insurance policy. The insurance company is the only entity which can approve or deny a claim.

Disclosure of business and family-related connections

1ST CHOICE may pay fees or commissions to other agencies or businesses in return for information, services or goods.

Due to laws within some states where 1ST CHOICE provides services, the agency must inform clients that family members, friends and business associates of staff working at 1ST CHOICE Advisory Services, Inc. may hold ownership in or work at senior housing and care communities or may hold ownership in or work within healthcare settings.

Danielle Ionesi, RN and Housing & Care Advisor employed by 1st CHOICE, holds ownership in an adult family home located at 17106 NE 172nd Pl, Woodinville, WA 98072. This advisor will not make referrals to AFH where they hold ownership.

Infractions of senior housing and care providers

If you are considering a senior housing or care provider which offers care services, the provider is licensed by a specific state agency and is required to make available inspection reports to the consumer. Because senior care providers are regulated, they are subject to inspections and follow-ups to complaints or self-reported issues. Consumers should inquire directly of the provider what, if any, infractions exist.

Clients are given access to the full spectrum of options and care

Nearly all senior housing providers that a client would wish to consider are contracted with the agency. Approximately 15% of the licensed or existing providers do not meet the minimum expectations of the agency, and are therefore never given as options to clients. A small percentage of the total provider network of assisted living and adult family homes serving older adults has opted not to contract with the agency. Such providers tend to have lengthy waiting lists, or have been in existence for decades and rarely have availability. The agency may opt to make known such providers to clients without receiving a referral fee. The agency does not generally contract with providers who specialize in care to young adults with developmental disabilities or young adults with mental health concerns. 1ST CHOICE Advisory focuses on serving older adults in our community.

1st CHOICE makes referrals to in-home care providers as well as Medicare-certified in-home care. 1st CHOICE only makes referrals to in-home care providers when the client (the senior or the senior's family) is paying for the services with private funds or funds received through a long-term care policy. As with referrals to senior living care communities and homes, 1st CHOICE does not charge a referral fee for any care which is being paid for with state or federal programs such as Medicare or Medicaid.

For some older adults, in-home care may be a short term solution. It is common for people to request help from 1st CHOICE to transition from in-home care to a residential care option such as assisted living, memory or adult care home.

1st CHOICE maintains referral agreements with one or more agencies in each region we serve. Much like making a move to a senior community, 1st CHOICE and its staff cannot speak to the quality of services provided by an individual in-home caregiver. It is the sole responsibility of the client to interview and contract for care services.

The agency makes referrals to both skilled nursing as well as Medicare-certified in-home care, yet neither the agency nor its employees receive compensation from such referrals.

The agency may make additional referrals to clients for legal assistance, financial guidance, health care or therapies, real estate, moving services or other community-based services. Neither the agency nor employees of the agency receive financial compensation for such referrals. Referrals to products or services require the due diligence of the consumer. The agency does not warrant or guarantee the quality or performance of any ancillary product or service. Further, the agency is held harmless for any loss, injury or harm which may occur as the result of accessing ancillary products or services.

Frequency of the agency's visits to providers

Senior communities and care homes receive referrals from the agency only once an in-person review process has been completed of the senior housing provider. Dates on which agency employees have visited specific providers are available by request to the agency. It is critical to note that frequency of visits from the agency should not be given value by the client to anticipate future performance of a provider. A visit by the agency is only a snapshot in time. The client must continue on-going review and communication with the provider and/or regulatory or advocacy organizations at their own discretion and in a manner which fosters quality communication and quality care.

1ST CHOICE employees are mandatory reporters

State law requires all employees of the agency report suspected instances of abuse, neglect, abandonment or financial fraud to the appropriate authorities. Clients must be aware that the request of a client to not disclose such matters to authorities is against the law and strictly prohibited by the agency.

1ST CHOICE involves the older adult(s) as a standard business practice

To the maximum extent possible, the agency involves the older adult in the process of searching for housing or care options. If the client is not the older adult, but rather their responsible party, and they feel that the older adult may suffer unnecessary stress due to involvement in the search or feel the older adult may not be able to comprehend the situation, the client is encouraged to communicate their concerns with the agency immediately. The agency endeavors to treat each older adult with the respect and dignity they deserve while remaining committed to the rights of older adults to be involved in these important decisions.

If you choose to end your relationship with 1ST CHOICE

Additional licensing and regulation of senior housing and care referral agencies

State governments in both Washington and Oregon have established specific laws regarding the operation and/or processes followed by senior housing and care referral agents. In Washington the law is RCW 18.330 and in Oregon House Bill 2661 was passed into law in 2017. Because the names and codes associated with these laws may change, consumers can search for the laws on the internet, or contact 1st CHOICE by email containing a link to the law. 1st CHOICE can also print and send the law to you via US mail upon request.

Washington state law became effective in 2013. The laws in Oregon are newer and the Oregon Department of Human Services is still developing and defining regulatory processes for referral agencies. Please refer back to 1st CHOICE’s web site or contact us for possible updates to requirements of the state of Oregon. As of the date of this disclosure form (noted in the bottom margin), Oregon law requires 1st CHOICE to be registered with the state and the following additional wording is required by the state of Oregon:

The names of the assisted living and care providers referred to you are required to be contracted with 1st CHOICE. The contracts 1st CHOICE holds are into perpetuity, yet a provider may elect to cancel their agreement at any time. Consumers accessing the help of 1st CHOICE are under no obligation to select a provider presented to them by 1st CHOICE and consumers may elect to stop working with 1st CHOICE by notifying us.

In Oregon as in Washington and Idaho, 1st CHOICE is likely already contracted with the providers you would wish to consider. Although the state of Oregon does not require 1st CHOICE to follow the stringent guidelines of HIPAA, 1st CHOICE chooses to protect consumer’s private information and agrees to only disclose such information to senior living providers after receiving acknowledgement of this disclosure and information release form. The state of Oregon is developing a website where complaints regarding senior living providers will appear. This web site is <https://ltlicensing.oregon.gov>
